The FCC has no right to tell me who can give me my weather and traffic updates. whether I get them from a local tv station in my home, a local radio station, or a pay service such as satellite radio, is no concern of theirs. The information provided by all of these types of media is not copyrighted and can be provided by anyone. What is next, is the FCC going to tell me that I cannot stick my head out the window to see what the weather is like and that I must get it from local television or radio ?
